Tomorrow's public comment

External Email

Attn PDC Commissioners,

It was my intention to attend the meeting tomorrow and participate in the public comment period.

Unfortunately, some family issues have come up and at this point they made this attendance geographically impossible on my part.

I really prefer to be there in person, so I will save some of my Evergreen comments for the next time I can make it.

I did want to notify the commission that I have held back about 50 more prepared complaints just to let staff make a bit more progress on the ones already in process before I file more volume.

I was also able to receive some excellent feedback both from respondents and staff that should even further improve future complaints.

I feel a bit responsible for the large volume of violations I am, once again, uncovering all around the state - and I blame myself for this current surge due it part to my not keeping up a higher volume of complaints over the past few years. I suspect, had I maintained my historic volume of complaints over the past few years at a higher level (say 20+ per month), I'd be finding fewer obvious and overt violations right now. I grew a bit lazy, so I hope to rectify that over the next few months, but I'll try to send these most obvious complaints to staff in staggered volumes and numbers that the agency appears more capable of handling in an efficient way - so I'm self-imposing a cap of no more than 50 per month, not including supplemental complaints for existing investigations.

I also wanted to thank PDC staff for reopening the Michael Steadman complaint and addressing the previously unaddressed allegations in the first complaint (Case #139325). I believe this was done in part due to response to my recent public comment on this matter, and while I do have a supplemental complaint to file in that case, at least the very serious allegations that were unaddressed in the original review and investigation can be addressed now.

As I've mentioned in recent public comment, I am in the process of training more concerned citizens on how to more effectively file PDC complaints with the PDC, and I'm optimistic that some of this effort will also contribute to an improvement in the quality and quantity of complaints received by PDC staff over the next 6 months or so as well.

I look forward to chatting soon.

Best Regards,

Glen Morgan
